Version 1.2.0.4 offers full compatibility with the latest Mac OS 10.6. The convert engine has been optimized with better codec interface. Users can anticipate faster and smoother video conversion process with good ratio of quality to compression rate.

Shenzhen, China - Leawo Software, the professional video converter developer, today announced Leawo Mac Video Converter was upgraded to 1.2.0.4. This latest version has full compatibility with the latest Mac OS 10.6. The convert engine has been optimized with better codec interface. Users can anticipate faster and smoother video conversion process with good ratio of quality to compression rate.

Leawo Mac Video Converter 1.2.0.4 features these salient points:

- * Total compatibility with Snow Leopard OS and its later editions. This clean program uses its own codec library without causing conflicts between other media software.
- * Faster and smoother video conversion. With the video codec interface optimized, the efficiency of the video encoding has been satisfactorily increased. The upgrade also embraces multiple computing technology, divides the encoding processing into more threads to further lubricate the video conversion process.
- * Optimized output video quality based on presets. The video format presets have been optimized for a better ratio of quality to compression rate. It affects the conversion using presets only but the custom setting by the users.
- * Some improvements in video edit function. The accuracy of the playback slide bar for video trim has been increased. The compressing algorithm has been optimized to keep output video quality after video edit.
- * Fixed bugs in update function. The program update parameters have been corrected due to a recent change in the official update server.

"Leawo Mac Video Converter is developed and maintained as an easy-to-use, multitask-capable and reliable video format exchange solution by our professional and attentive engineers. If you are looking for a Swiss army knife of Mac video converter, I am sure you would find our product very competitive." Said Sophia, manager of Leawo's marketing department.
