

Parasol Releases Revolve 1.0 - An Ambient Reaction Game for iPhone

Published on 01/21/10

Parasol today released Revolve 1.0, an experimental ambient reaction game for iPhone and iPod touch. Combining abstract visuals and soothing ambient music by Jori Kemppe with addictive gameplay, Revolve is at the same time a relaxing and challenging gaming experience. The rules are simple: Touch the screen when a circle is in the zone of the same color. Accuracy is rewarded, missteps are punished severely.

Turku, Finland - Parasol today released Revolve 1.0, an experimental ambient reaction game for iPhone and iPod touch. Combining abstract visuals and soothing ambient music with addictive gameplay, Revolve is at the same time a relaxing and challenging gaming experience.

Revolve is designed solely for the iPhone and iPod touch, and fully utilizes the capabilities of the platform by offering a full stereo soundtrack and extremely simple controls. The rules are simple: Touch the screen when a circle is in the zone of the same color. Accuracy is rewarded, missteps are punished severely.

"What's great about the iPhone platform is that it enables game developers to be as original and creative as they can", said Johan Halin, developer of Revolve. "This is what we strive to accomplish with our games as well, and I think Revolve is a good example of that."
