"With the App Store having more than 140,000 applications, consumers are awash with hundreds of new applications appearing every day, and so developers are constantly searching for creative ways to maximize the value offered by their applications." said Paul Jaimovich, founder and CEO of Miami based GP Imports. "We studied the App Store in order to find the types of applications that customers want the most. We then built an application containing all of them, and are offering it for the lowest price point possible, in an effort to offer unmatched value to our customers."
