

Malkinware announces Reference Tracker 1.6 for Mac OS X

Published on 02/08/10

Malkinware today is delighted to announce Reference Tracker 1.6, an update to their academic reference manager and research tool for Mac OS X. Reference Tracker creates documents that store all the user's citations and references from their essays, research projects or books and automatically creates formatted reference lists in a variety of styles when needed. Version 1.6 adds support for the Australian Government Publication Service Harvard referencing style.

Kilmarnock, UK - Malkinware today is delighted to announce Reference Tracker 1.6, an update to their popular academic reference manager and research tool for Mac OS X. Reference Tracker is an indispensable tool for writers, researchers or students. It creates documents that store all the user's citations and references from their essays, research projects or books and automatically creates formatted reference lists in a variety of popular referencing styles to insert into the user's writing when needed.

Among Reference Tracker's unique features is there is no need to type out all the details of a referenced publication. Just give Reference Tracker a book's ISBN and it will fetch all the details from the internet automatically. If the user doesn't have the book in hand, typing keywords into its built-in publication search will get a list of matching results. With a single click, search results will be added to their reference list. When referencing an online web resource, the application can pull all of the details from Safari or Firefox with just one click.

To make managing references easy, Reference Tracker provides folders for organizing references and sticky notes for annotations and comments.

Reference Tracker can send a formatted reference list directly to the end of word processing documents. The dynamic 'Send To' menu will show a list of open documents in Microsoft Word, Apple Pages and Nisus Writer Pro. Users can easily append their formatted list to the end of an open document, or create a new document with the contents of the list.

Feature highlights include:

- * Create Full References in a single step
- * Reference Web Pages and Emails with a single click
- * Easily import existing Reference Lists from word processors, reference managers and Google Scholar
- * Integration with Microsoft Word, Nisus Writer Pro and Apple's Pages
- * Easily Organize References
- * Export formatted lists to anywhere

Version 1.6 sports many new improvements including:

- * Added support for the AGPS Harvard reference style
- * Improved compatibility with Pages '08, '09 and Microsoft Word
- * Bug fixes and general improvements

Minimum Requirements:

- * Mac OS X Version 10.4 Tiger, 10.5 Leopard or 10.6 Snow Leopard
- * Universal Binary for PowerPC and Intel
- * 7.5 MB Hard Drive space
- * Internet Connection required for ISBN and Publication search
