New Mexico based Lion Arch Dev Co. has released DebrisBlaster 1.0 for iPhone and iPod touch devices. In DebrisBlaster, you are on a mission to clear our surrounding space from debris. You accomplish this by touching your device's screen and setting off a chain reaction of explosions. For each level you will only have one bomb to achieve your objective. You will have to destroy one piece of debris and use that explosion to detonate a nearby object creating a chain reaction.

Rio Rancho, New Mexico - Lion Arch Dev Co. has released DebrisBlaster 1.0 for iPhone and iPod touch devices. In DebrisBlaster, you are on a mission to clear our surrounding space from debris. You accomplish this by touching your device's screen and setting off a chain reaction of explosions. For each level you will only have one bomb to achieve your objective. You will have to destroy one piece of debris and use that explosion to detonate a nearby object creating a chain reaction. The game gets increasingly harder as you progress through the levels.

Earth is surrounded by an ever-increasing amount of space debris. As of 2009, there is an estimated 19,000 KNOWN objects in orbit around our planet. The origin of space debris can be traced to spent rocket upper stages, abandoned satellites, lost equipment, or from the testing of anti-satellite weapons. In 1985, a 1-ton (2,200 lbs.) satellite was destroyed in a test creating thousands of pieces of space debris.

In 2007, a similar test was held over China that resulting in over one million pieces of space debris. To this date, the problem has only gotten worse. Currently there are efforts to clear our surrounding space of this problem. Hopefully we will see greater strides in this area in our lifetime. Help us bring attention to this issue.
