

iDaze 9000 v1.2 for iPhone OS - Fun Delayed Audio Feedback Effect

Published on 03/15/10

Ivanovich Games today announces iDaze 9000 v1.2, an update to their hilarious audio feedback application for iPhone and iPod touch devices. iDaze 9000 uses advanced digital audio algorithms to create a gap between speaking, and then hearing it. Known as Delayed Audio Feedback, this effect can be so confusing that the speaker becomes dazed. iDaze 9000 will create waves of laughter as a friend attempts to recite the multiplication tables while his speech is reduced to gibberish.

Barcelona, Spain - Ivanovich Games today is pleased to announce the release of iDaze 9000 v1.2, an update to their hilarious audio feedback application for iPhone and iPod touch devices. iDaze 9000 uses advanced digital audio algorithms to create a gap between speaking, and then hearing it. Known as Delayed Audio Feedback, this effect can be so confusing that the speaker becomes dazed. iDaze 9000 will create waves of laughter as a friend attempts to recite the multiplication tables while his speech is reduced to gibberish.

When we speak, we expect to immediately hear what we have said. A sensitive feedback loop continually adjusts our speech based on what we hear. Interfere with this loop, and the ability to speak normally breaks down. iDaze 9000 uses advanced digital audio algorithms to create a gap between speaking, and then hearing it. This effect, known as Delayed Audio Feedback, can be so confusing that the speaker becomes dazed.

The idea for iDaze 9000 came from a Top Spanish TV daily show called "El Hormiguero" (The Nest), where they use a delayed audio feedback device called "the Idiotizer" in interviews with well known people. The amount of delay and the number of repetitions is fully adjustable, and iDaze 9000 can also be used to make people sound like cartoon characters. Challenge your friends with tongue-twisters, and reading a page from a book in less than a minute.

Feature Highlights:

- * Leave your friends in a daze after they try iDaze 9000
- * Delayed Audio Feedback makes it impossible to speak normally
- * Bring iDaze 9000 to a party and watch your friends laugh uncontrollably
- * Completely adjustable from minimum to maximum delay effect
- * Can also be used to make someone sound like a cartoon character
- * Join the world-wide iDaze craze
