Waretown, New Jersey - Life-Giving Studios, the developers of Armored Warfare, has made additions and improvements to their already popular program. This latest update adds even more to the already realistic tactical artillery game. Players will appreciate the increase in tank selection and maps to help them defeat the enemy in this challenging app.

There is no shortage of game apps on the market but few of them offer outstanding graphics and exciting challenge. People from Life-Giving Studios decided to change that. "The overall quality of most artillery games for the iPhone is low; they are too simple or dull. We wanted to fix that by developing an innovative tactical 3D artillery game." Armored Warfare is the result.

Armored Warfare is a tactical artillery game that uses physics and 3D imagery to for a profound sense of realism. Each of the armored units has a design based on real tanks and comes with stats indicating size, firing power, armor and secret weapon. In this new version release, two more units, an M109 Paladin and a 2S19 Msta-S, have been added to the selection of tanks that a player can choose from.

Game players can shoot or protect themselves from enemy fire, as well as destroy obstacles that stand in their way. To help users navigate the various landscapes and strategize their attacks, maps are included for reference. There are now three more maps being released in the update. To add to the sense of realism and the sheer fun of playing, Armored Warfare provides a movable camera, which allows users to see everything that's going on outside their tank.

Another perk in the Armored Warfare app is the multi-player function. Players can take on the CPU or challenge others to a game of war. There are three levels of difficulty, so boredom is not an issue with this app. Mastering each stage takes time and strategy. Users who enjoy tactical games have a lot of fun playing this one.
