Kaliningrad, Russian Federation - Garry Stuglis has released iSiege 1.1, an update of the action game for iPhone and iPod touch devices. iSiege is a fresh, fun addition to the App Store and appeals to all ages, from teen to adults. Simple in concept, iSiege has only one rule - don't let attackers to reach a top of the wall. The iSiege game concept is very simple, yet provides enough challenge to satisfy even hardy gamers. There is only one spartan on the walls, that defend them from the many attackers by dropping stones.

To protect a fortress, the player operates the defender inclining iphone to the right or to the left, using built in iphone accelerometer and throws stones pressing the bottom right button stylized in the form of a board.

Aggressors attack a fortress by means of five ladders, on each of which in a random way every second gets out new attacker which then rises upward will not be dumped yet by a Spartan, or will not get yet upward and will kill a Spartan by a spear. Sounds easy but it takes some concentration and fast reflexes.
