IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Sydney, Australia - February 22, 2008 - Mac developer The Daily Grind has released DeIMG 4, an application that builds html tables from image files. DeIMG 4 is a major update and rebranding of The Daily Grind's That's Not A Picture image-to-table technology, adding css support and better optimization.

DeIMG can import PNG, TIFF, JPG, GIF and PDF files and convert them to HTML, XHTML or XHTML+CSS using table cell background colours. Cell size, optimization and alpha transparency handling can be customized. Generated code is ready for pasting into existing webpages or stand-alone publishing using the "generate header" option.

"DeIMG allows web authors to offer superior support for users who rely on browsers which support tables but not images," according to Daily Grind VP Damian Prendergast, "and the xhtml and css options improve accessibility to non-visual browsers."

- * Full Tiger and Leopard compatibility
- * Universal Binary for PowerPC and Intel
- * 216 kB Hard Drive space
