Transcena Design, makers of OfficeTime, the Mac time tracker with iCal synchronization, believes their product is so easy to use they are doubling their 60-day Money-back Guarantee to a full 120-days. OfficeTime's latest version 1.3.1 offers over 20 new features and is available for both Mac and Windows machines. An added bonus is data can be moved seamlessly between both platforms.

Edmonton, Alberta, Canada - Transcena Design, makers of OfficeTime, the Mac time tracker with iCal synchronization, believes their product is so easy to use they are doubling their 60-day Money-back Guarantee to a full 120-days.

Now, in addition to the fully activated 21-day free trial, you can buy with confidence knowing you have an extended "120-day No-Hassles, Any-Reason, Money-Back Guarantee." This allows you up to 4 monthly billing cycles, to fully integrate the features of this business tool into the workday, without an investment risk.

OfficeTime's community of users recognizes its ease of use for getting up and running quickly, but its ability to increase billables is part of what keeps people hooked.

"OfficeTime helps me justify any extra fees to clients, it allows me to document everything that was done, and if it wasn't within scope, it becomes a contingency fee, "states Sigrid Albert, B.Des., MGDC and Principal of StepUp Communications Inc. "So I would definitely say my billings have increased since I started using OfficeTime. And my time planning and estimating has become much more accurate and efficient."

And until June 1, 2008, you can get OfficeTime for only $39.95 before a price increase to $47. The extended 120-day guarantee is, of course, available immediately.

"I downloaded the demo and thought, "it probably won't work for me but I gotta give it a shot," announced Glen Page, the Technology Systems Administrator of ThetNet for Thetford Academy. "The software was very easy to set up and begin using. I love the synchronization with iCal and the ease of use."

How can Transcena Design afford such a guarantee? Well, they have only had one return so far this year.

Maybe that's because OfficeTime's development team listens to their community and then responds. They have already released hundreds of free improvements, based on suggestions from the user community. And all 1.x releases are given away free to every current owner.

OfficeTime's latest version 1.3.1 offers over 20 new features and is available for both Mac and Windows machines. An added bonus is data can be moved seamlessly between both platforms.

Find out why teams, consultants and freelancers rely on OfficeTime's ease of use: intuitive reporting, quick invoicing, and full Leopard compatibility. It just works. Intuitively and easily.

Purchase: $39.95 (until June 1, 2008, when price becomes $47) with a 120-Day Satisfaction Guarantee. Mac User Groups may contact OfficeTime for further discounts. Transcena Design Inc., a busy web and applications development firm, needed to track its employees' time. When they couldn't find a full featured, easy to use tracking application, this 17-year old agency (with a zest for clean design and usable interfaces), decided to build the OfficeTime time tracking application, a time-tracker based on real-world business needs.
