Kamloops, British Columbia - Koingo Software has officially unveiled their new product: AirRadar. This new title allows users to scan for wireless networks in range of their computer, compile favourite and filter lists, and view detailed network information. The highlight being the ability to automatically join the best open network.

Whether you are driving around looking for wireless networks, stuck in traffic, sitting on the beach, or if you are curious how strong your wireless signal is at home, AirRadar provides a more linear approach to network hunting. Setup a scan frequency, and have new open or closed networks have their name spoken, play alerts, or display notifications.

Various other options allow you to customize your network list further, including assigning colors to best open networks and sound cues. The best part - AirRadar is absolutely free!

* ADDITIONAL IMPORTANT INFORMATION ****

In some countries, such as Germany, it is illegal to connect to open networks which do not belong to you. Only use AirRadar to the extent your local law permits. We disclaim all liability for your actions.
