

kode80 Updates 1-bit Ninja with Game Center and More

Published on 10/27/11

Florida based kode80 LLC today announces the release of 1-bit Ninja version 1.1 adding Game Center leaderboards and achievements, including both scores and completion times along with multiple skill based achievements. Version 1.1 brings a new camera mode and the ability to export replays for upload to YouTube. 1-bit Ninja brings nostalgia up to date with its 3D slant on the classic 2D gameplay.

Fort Lauderdale, Florida - kode80 LLC today is pleased to announce the release of 1-bit Ninja version 1.1, an update that brings Game Center support, replay video export and more. The first major update to 1-bit Ninja since its release this summer, version 1.1 adds Game Center leaderboards for both scores and completion times along with multiple skill based achievements. Players now also have the ability to export replays as video, making it easy to upload their best moments to YouTube for extra bragging rights.

Additionally, a brand new "follow-cam" has been added to the list of unlockable camera modes bringing a new up-close perspective to gameplay and replays. 1-bit Ninja's creator Ben Hopkins had this to say "1-bit Ninja fans have been unanimous in their requests for Game Center support, based on some of the messages I've received there are some extremely good players out there so I'm looking forward to seeing their scores, times and videos".
