Aquafadas unveils PulpMotion 1.1 and raises the bar in interactive slideshows: new navigation capabilities, zoom on media, improved control over timing. Not to mention Silly News...

MONTPELLIER, FRANCE - April 30 2007: PulpMotion 1.1 adds around 20 new features in Aquafadas' innovative slideshow and presentation tool.

At the top of the list, improved control over timing lets users choose whether the embedded videos should play in full length: exported movies can now include the video soundtracks mixed with the background music. Automatic speed and timing adjustments to the length of the soundtrack, were also introduced, together with the new navigation toolbar letting the users skip to the next/previous medias.

This new version, with its new user interface layout, also brings a new Zoom-On-Media function that brings the current media in full view, with additional information data and an optional apparition effect.

Finally, a new theme has been added to the growing list of available ones: Silly News. With its breakthrough background removal technologies, straight from Aquafadas advanced research lab, Silly News lets the user create fake newscats with custom backdrops, and choose between 8 speakers ranging from the very serious Joe, to Mr Tomato or a cute Teddy Bear. Silly News raises the bar in silly podcasts.
