Kiev, Ukraine - Alterplay today is thrilled to announce the release of Debty for the iPhone, a new financial iPhone app for keeping track of friends who owe money to the phone user. Along with keeping track of unpaid dues, the Debty app also logs money the phone user borrows and reminds to pay back.

Many people often lend money to friends and forget about it. With the Debty app for iPhone, one can lend out money and be reminded to whom it was lent and when that money is due back. Also the app lets users track money they borrowed from someone and reminds them to pay back. The app offers a complete overview of all debts, with the balance, name of people who owe money, status of payback and reminder time. Additionally, it's possible to set a reminder in the calendar with a direct link to a specific debt, send a notification by email or remind to pay back with a phone call. Debty has a safety feature that requires a PIN code for access to the app.

Here's how it works. Let's say the iPhone user and his friend went shopping and the latter left the wallet at home. The phone user can lend out some money to the friend. One can quickly enter the contact name of the friend who borrows money, along with the amount loaned and the reason why the money was borrowed. This allows the iPhone user to track the lent money and get it back without forgetting.

The app has a beautiful and easy-to-use interface, support for currencies of all countries, and localization of the interface to popular languages such as English, French, German, Greek, Polish and Russia.
