

FarFinder and Webjimbo On Sale

Published on 12/11/08

Flying Mac has announced that FarFinder and Webjimbo, their Macintosh remote access products went on sale today. FarFinder makes a Mac's files accessible anywhere on the internet, either by web browser or iPhone. Webjimbo allows users to access and edit their Yojimbo data, by browser and iPhone. Family licence bundles are also discounted.

Wellington, New Zealand - FarFinder and Webjimbo, the Macintosh remote access products from independent Mac developer Flying Mac, went on sale today. FarFinder is on special for $25, reduced from $35, and Webjimbo is $20, reduced from $30. Family licence bundles are also discounted.

FarFinder makes a Mac's files accessible from anywhere on the internet using any web browser, iPhone or iPod Touch. Users browse their Macs using a familiar, Finder-like interface, and Spotlight-style searching is also available.

Webjimbo allows users to access, search and edit their Yojimbo data, also from any web browser, iPhone or iPod Touch.

Access to both products is truly cross-platform: all that is required is a modern web browser running under OS X, Windows or Linux.

Installation has been made as simple as possible, bringing remote access within easy reach of the ordinary consumer. Automatic configuration means that the products just work for the majority of users. For others, smart diagnostics guide the user through any required setup. Both products come with a 20 day, fully-featured trial period and require OS X 10.4 or higher.
