

Dejal introduces Valentines 1.0 for iPhone

Published on 02/04/09

Dejal Systems, LLC today introduced Valentines version 1.0 for the iPhone. Celebrate Valentine's Day with a fun valentine message and a photo in a heart-shaped frame! Any number of valentines can be created, using existing photos or take ones with the iPhone's camera. Customize the message text. Show the valentines on your iPhone or iPod touch, or save to the Photos app.

Portland, Oregon - Dejal Systems, LLC today introduced Valentines version 1.0 for the iPhone. Valentines enables you to create special Valentine's Day messages for the love of your life, or messages for multiple people. You can swipe through the messages to see them all. Your custom message text is displayed above a custom photo enclosed in an attractive heart-shaped frame.

You can show the valentines on your iPhone or iPod touch, or use the camera button to save the displayed valentine to your Photo Library. A tap of the info button flips the valentine over to reveal a field to edit the message, plus buttons to change the heart photo.

While editing, a Valentines button displays a list of Valentine messages in the order they appear on Valentines' main side. You can change the order, delete them, or add any number of new ones.

Dejal is a long-established independent Mac software company, now expanding into iPhone software.
