Developed by one guy, Gavin Thornton, a new indie developer releasing his first game on Apple devices. All design, programming, graphics and sound effects in the game were created by Gavin himself, only the music is from an external source. With any luck this game will be the first of many by this new indie developer.

The full Arrow Mania game includes 30 levels. Most levels are huge and the game gives many hours of addictive gameplay, a definite sense of value for money compared to many games at this price. Gavin is now working on a free version which will include a selection of levels; then the Android Phone and Tablet version will be worked on and released soon after. Windows Phone and Blackberry are currently being considered.
