InfoClick knows precisely what words have been used, so there's no guessing; it offers a guided process of progressively narrowing down the matches in a series of simple choices.

Solana Beach, California - Nisus Software has announced the release of InfoClick, its uniquely powerful email search tool designed to guide you to the emails you've been trying to find.

InfoClick is designed to be used with Apple's Mail application to navigate through your emails to see the words, contacts, and information within. InfoClick knows precisely what words you've used, so there's no guessing; it offers a guided process of progressively narrowing down the matches in a series of simple choices. That means you can't ever produce a search with zero matches. For example, when you're searching for all emails c ? emails.

"Although Apple's Spotlight search is better than the competition, many still find it inadequate. InfoClick is much simpler, more versatile and much more powerful" said President and CEO Jerzy Lewak. "Perhaps the most important difference between other products and InfoClick, is that InfoClick guides you to the available choices only. This helps you see associations and prevents empty search results, always guaranteeing a find."

InfoClick offers additional features to make searching your emails easier. For example to see all emails received from educational organizations in the US, simply type .edu in the From field. With a single click, you can narrow-down your search to only those emails that had an attachment, and/or those received in a given date range, and/or those that contain specific words. You can choose, as alternatives, all displayed word spellings used in the emails, so you don't miss an email because of spelling errors.

InfoClick also offers a note editor, allowing you to collect and organize links to emails, files, web pages, and other URLs (notes are completely searchable).
