UK based Molfar Studios today introduces Meow Quest, their new spot the difference game for iOS devices. The game challenges players' skills of paying attention to details and to spot the differences. Meow Quest features many adventures for players to work their way through. To help players progress through the levels there are several boosts and power-ups available. Meow Quest has been developed with retina displays in mind so it looks beautiful on the latest and greatest iPhones and iPads.

London, United Kingdom - Molfar Studios today is thrilled to announce the tantalizing 'Meow Quest,' a free game for iOS (iPad, iPhone, iPod), Android smartphones and tablets, and Amazon Kindle devices. With casual mobile games proving ever more popular with children and adults alike, 'Meow Quest' promises to be one of the most popular games released this September.

The game challenges players' skills of paying attention to details and to spot the differences. To help players progress through the levels there are several boosts and power-ups available. For example, on the level player can activate 'time freeze' to temporarily stop a timer, can activate 'magnifying glass' to highlight differences and can activate 'pencil' to spot one difference. Mystery objects pop up in unexpected places, adding an extra challenge to the 'spot the difference' format.

Meow Quest features many adventures for players to work their way through, with dozens of unique levels in each adventure. Each adventure has its own theme, with the themes including Dracula and Transylvania, Halloween, Christmas and New Year, Ancient pyramids, Big Foot and the Solar System. Players can also make in-app purchases in order to make the game easier, although it is not essential to make any purchases to progress.

Meow Quest is a free game for users of Apple and Android products to download from a range of app stores, including the Amazon app store. It has been designed using vector graphics, so that the visuals will not lose fidelity on higher resolution screens, meaning it can be used on iOS and Android devices of any size.
