Cupertino, California - People who've ever bookmarked a web page and wondered "wouldn't it be amazing if I could bookmark everything that I like on the 'net or in real life?" can now stop wondering and start bookmarking, thanks to the remarkable new no-cost app Uplike. Already well-received on the App Store, Uplike has been downloaded in more than 100 countries (source: Apple) since its launch last month.

Uplike, which in its very short history has already been selected to Appsfire's "We Love" category, easily and enjoyably lets iOS and Android users collect and organize everything they like, including websites, pictures, videos, places, people and more. With Uplike they can plan their holidays by adding hotels and activities, select the best restaurants, create gift ideas by blending websites with actual shops, and even replace business cards by simply taking a picture of what they wish to remember. Other Uplike special features include the ability to:

- * Explore the bookmarks of friends and followers
- * Create a personalized URL and share online or offline bookmarks via Facebook, Twitter and other social platforms
- * Comment on any bookmark
- * Geo-localize and auto-tag bookmarks
- * Add bookmarks while offline, or even when using the phone
- * Receive personalized suggestions based on the last viewed or added bookmark
- * Designate bookmarks as private

Plus, Uplike features a convenient integrated player for YouTube, Dailymotion and Vimeo videos, and a clever direct preview so that all bookmarks feature a pre-visual image.

"Whether it's a unique pair of shoes, a particular restaurant that they want to remember, a cool video - there's no limit. And best of all, their bookmarks will follow them wherever they go.
