Burolo, Italy - Hyperbolic Software is proud to see Smart Trash featured at TheMacBundles - the much needed new model for marketing software that's being promoted by Kagi. Founded by independent software developer Stephen Becker of MacEase, TheMacBundles represents something new in the history of Mac software. Intended as a "Farmer's Market" for software, TheMacBundles connects developers of high quality software directly with consumers in a way that's fair to developers while also providing consumers with a great bargain.

Unlike most bundles, TheMacBundles is put together by a developer for developers, and virtually all of the proceeds goes to the participating developers rather than to some third party marketer. And unlike most bundles, there are no "filler" programs. Just great software offered at a great price.

Giuseppe Giunto, developer of Smart Trash said, "I believe we have produced a compelling bundle containing some of the best offerings of the Mac software community".

The bundle offered at TheMacBundles website is unusual both for the consistent high quality of all the software that's contained in the bundle and for the low price the bundle is selling for. Kagi, the highly respected pioneer of e-commerce services, is promoting the bundle.
