Published on 03/19/14

Incredible Bee today announces the release of Thoughts 1.2.0, a major update to its note taking and text editing tool. Designed by Apple Design Award Winner Dietmar Kerschner, Thoughts lets users organize documents, thoughts, notes, lists and images in a virtual bookshelf. Thoughts has been recently acquired by Incredible Bee to fit in with its portfolio of apps. This update ships with major bug fixes and adds support for Macs with Retina Displays, as well as support for newer Mac OS X versions.

Vienna, Austria - Incredible Bee today released Thoughts 1.2.0, a major update to its note taking and text editing tool. Designed by Apple Design Award Winner Dietmar Kerschner, Thoughts lets users organize documents, thoughts, notes, lists and images in a virtual bookshelf. Thoughts was recently acquired by Incredible Bee to fit in with its portfolio of apps. This update shipped with major bug fixes and adds support for Macs with Retina Displays, as well as support for newer Mac OS X versions.

Under a new flag:

"We acquired Thoughts from green&slimy back in December 2013," says Ramon Huidobro, Chief

Software Officer at Incredible Bee. "We feel that the app fits in perfectly with the rest of our app portfolio."

A fresh new take:

"With Thoughts, we saw a great opportunity to build upon a well-received app," the Chief Software Officer continues. "We want to breathe new life into Thoughts and provide further improvements."

Keeping your thoughts organized:

Thoughts enables users to keep journals, manage collections, create TODO lists, get things done, write novels, keep notes from meetings, create personal wikis, write blogs, and has several other uses.
