

A Better Finder Rename 7.9 extends sorting capabilities

Published on 07/25/07

The latest release of our file renaming solution extends its sorting capabilities with a second sorting order. This is especially useful when working with digital image files that were shot using the "rapid fire" continuous shooting mode of modern digital SLR cameras. In these situations, multiple shots may be taken with the same timestamp leading to ordering problems during renaming. The new feature gracefully deals with such situations.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

publicspace.net is pleased to announce the immediate availability of A Better Finder Rename 7.9 The latest release of our file renaming solution extends its sorting capabilities with a second sorting order.

This is especially useful when working with digital image files that were shot using the "rapid fire" continuous shooting mode of modern digital SLR cameras. In these situations, multiple shots may be taken with the same timestamp leading to ordering problems during renaming. The new feature gracefully deals with such situations.

A Better Finder Rename thus further strengthens its already impressive array of specialized photography features, which already included EXIF timestamp reading in JPEG and a variety of professional RAW image formats, sequence number generation and manipulation, etc..

A Better Finder Rename has long been the most comprehensive file renaming solution for the Macintosh and has transformed the tedious and time-consuming task of renaming multiple files into a simple matter of seconds for thousands of creative professionals across the world. It is based on over 10 years of listening to our users and addressing their requirements to the best of our abilities.
