

Chris Paveglio releases InDesign Font Catalog 2 update

Published on 08/01/09

Chris Paveglio has released a new version of InDesign Font Catalog, a program for making visual catalogs of font families and their styles. ID Font Catalog is unique from other font display apps by grouping font families together, and making a short list of each style. Version 2.1 includes several important bug fixes. The update is free for current users of version 2.

Manheim, PA - InDesign Font Catalog version 2.1 is now available. ID Font Catalog creates a catalog of every font a user has, using Adobe InDesign. It is unique from other font catalog applications because it groups fonts by their family, and only shows each font "style" in a short list.

Graphic designers and artists with a large list of fonts appreciate seeing a list of fonts in a compact style. There is a user definable "Font Skip List" where a user can omit certain fonts from the catalog, for example foreign fonts (Chinese, Japanese, Cyrillic) can be skipped even though OS X installs some of these fonts by default. Version 2.1 includes several important bug fixes. The update is free for users of v2.

Other options include 3 new document styles, for professional looking and functional type samples; the option to choose any InDesign document preset for making a catalog (Single Paragraph style only); and a completely rewritten core for better performance and reliability.
