Published on 06/17/14

Paris based, Information Addicts today introduces OneReader 1.0.1 for iOS, a newsreader that combines the efficiency of the traditional RSS readers with the ways we get news today. OneReader aggregates RSS feeds and articles exchanged on social networks in an efficient interface designed to make it easy to browse a lot of content. The app is focused on efficiency and allows you to quickly scan the news whatever its origin and decide what you want to read, share, store or skip.

Paris, France - Available today, OneReader by Information Addicts is a newsreader for iPhone and iPad that combines the efficiency of the traditional RSS readers with the ways we get news today. It aggregates RSS feeds and articles exchanged on social networks in an efficient interface designed to make it easy to browse a lot of content.

No matter how you like to get your news, RSS, Twitter, Facebook... OneReader makes it easy to deal with the large number of articles you are bombarded with every day.

With OneReader:

- * You are in control of your news sources: your favorite web sites through RSS feeds and your contacts on social networks. OneReader turns your Twitter, Facebook and App.net timelines into a stream of articles, presented with their title and an excerpt.

- * Your friends' and contacts' posts become comments to the articles and you can reply, favorite, like directly from the app.

- * You keep track of what you have read: you get each article just once, even if it is shared on multiple sources.

- * You enjoy many options for sharing and storing articles (Twitter, Facebook, Evernote, Pocket, Instapaper, create task in Omnifocus or Things, etc.).

- * You can read your news on any of your devices (iPad, iPhone, iPod touch) with full synchronization.

OneReader is focused on efficiency and allows you to quickly scan the news whatever its origin and decide what you want to read, share, store... or skip. This makes it the ideal news reader for those who value selecting their sources and making their own decision on which articles will interest them.

The overall aim of OneReader is to make it easy to deal with information delivered as streams. Future versions will add more sources, more sharing and storage services and will continue streamlining the interface. Later, additional features are planned to help when the streams become really too large.

Language Support:

- * English and French
