Seattle, Washington - REFOG Inc., is pleased to introduce its new app, REFOG Mac Keylogger, a user-friendly keylogger for Macintosh computers. It allows you to monitor children, teenagers or anyone else using your computer. It saves visited websites, chat logs from programs such as Skype and absolutely anything else entered using the keyboard. Additionally, it takes periodic screenshots of the desktop, along with all open webpages and windows to provide a visual history of your computer's usage. Quick and easy to deploy, the program can also run in stealth mode so that no one other than yourself even needs to know that it's running.

The latest version features a new reports mode called Event Flow, which allows you to view all events by chronological order, and you can choose a category for events, date filter or use the manual search. Other features include the ability to bookmark events, clean up old records and screenshots to save disk space and timestamps to show you exactly what time the computer was turned on or switched off. The simple OS X-style GUI is available in multiple languages as well.

REFOG Mac Keylogger is a very useful tool for monitoring children online, making it a great tool to have in conjunction with the built-parental controls in the Macintosh operating system. However, unlike parental controls, this program does not restrict access to any of the computer's features, and since it operates in stealth mode, it is also useful for things such as trying to catch out a cheating spouse. REFOG Mac Keylogger is easy to use and requires no special knowledge or experience.
