

SecuritySpy 2.0 released - Major Update to Video Surveillance Software

Published on 08/18/09

Ben Software today announced the release of SecuritySpy 2.0, the premier multi-camera video surveillance software on the Macintosh platform. With features such as motion detection, real-time compression of multiple video and audio feeds, and network video and audio streaming, SecuritySpy is designed for demanding video surveillance applications. SecuritySpy supports a wide variety of network cameras and video servers, as well as FireWire, USB, and PCI video input devices.

London, UK - Ben Software today announced the release of SecuritySpy 2.0, the premier multi-camera video surveillance software on the Macintosh platform. With features such as motion detection, real-time compression of multiple video and audio feeds, and network video and audio streaming, SecuritySpy is designed for demanding video surveillance applications.

"SecuritySpy 2.0 is a significant update with exciting new features" said Ben Bird, the developer of SecuritySpy. "Combined with Mac OS X, the rock-solid operating system from Apple, SecuritySpy offers unsurpassed functionality, stability and ease of use."

SecuritySpy supports a wide variety of network cameras and video servers, including the popular Axis, Panasonic, Sony and Vivotek ranges, as well as FireWire, USB, and PCI video input devices. SecuritySpy features sophisticated motion detection, which can be used to trigger recording as well as email alerts and audio alarms. The built-in web server allows remote viewing of live video and audio, previously captured footage, as well as configuration of the software, from over the internet using a web browser or a mobile device such as the iPhone.

Pricing and Availability:

SecuritySpy can be downloaded and tested free of charge for 30 days before purchasing. Pricing is in British Pounds, Euros or US Dollars and depends on the number of s

v

SecuritySpy 2.0:

<http://www.securityspy.com/>

Overview and Screenshots:

<http://www.bensoftware.com/ss/overviewindex.html>

Download SecuritySpy:

<http://www.bensoftware.com/ss/securityspy.zip>

Purchase:

<http://www.bensoftware.com/purchase/>

Application Icon:

<http://www.bensoftware.com/images/iconss.gif>

Ben Software is an independent software development house focused on providing high-quality video-related software for the Macintosh platform.

###

prMac: Publish Once, Broadcast the World :: <http://prmac.com>

Ben Bird
Director
+44 20 8352 1014

ben@bensoftware.com

Link To Article: <https://prmac.com/release-id-7044.htm>
