

Turborilla releases Mad Skills Motocross for Mac OS X

Published on 08/29/09

Turborilla has released Mad Skills Motocross, their very first title for Mac OS X. Mad Skills Motocross is a sidescrolling motocross game that reminds of the golden days of gaming while also utilizing high-tech features. The game sports precise physical simulations, making the bike to rider interaction highly believable. The small, independent developer lets everyone try a demo version of the game for free. They are confident that the sheer fun of the gameplay will turn tryers into buyers.

Umea, Sweden - Turborilla has released their very first title for Mac OS X, Mad Skills Motocross. The small, independent developer lets everyone try a demo version of the game for free. They are confident that the sheer fun of the gameplay will turn tryers into buyers.

Mad Skills Motocross is a sidescrolling motocross game that reminds of the golden days of gaming while also utilizing high-tech features. The game sports precise physical simulations, making the bike to rider interaction highly believable. It can be played on Windows, Macintosh and Linux.

Turborilla believes in social media, thus the presence of Mad Skills Motocross on popular social networks. Remarks such as the following are not uncommon where the game is present: "This is possibly the best motocross game ever - James Dutton" - Facebook Fan Page

Updates for Mad Skills Motocross will be released continuously, the development does not stop just because the game has been released. "That is the beauty of independent games, we do not rush on to the next project. We listen to our customers and keep on adding features according to popular wishes", says CEO Tobias Andersson.
