Published on 02/02/15

Brisbane based developer, Injaia today introduces My Little Accountant 1.0, its new financial app for iPad and iPhone. Accountant is the personal accountant that is always there to help you manage your spending. The app combines income and expense tracking with an extensive set of reports and tools to plan a budget or a trip. All reports support sending a copy via email, uploading a copy to Dropbox or printing to an AirPrint compatible printer.

Brisbane, Australia - Injaia is very proud to announce the release today of My Little Accountant for iPad and iPhone. My Little Accountant helps users to monitor and to control their finances. Users can build a comprehensive budget and record all of their income and expenses, both one off and recurring. The app will then track their performance relative to their budget. Each week, My Little Accountant will automatically provide a summary of their performance. The summary combines both a quantitative assessment (where money was spent and how much) and a qualitative assessment (performance relative to previous weeks).

A comprehensive range of reports have been built into My Little Accountant to provide users a detailed picture of their financial activity. In addition to the weekly summary, the app provides details of spending over time and breakdowns of spending by category. All reports support sending a copy via email, uploading a copy to Dropbox or printing to an AirPrint compatible printer. The Professional Edition of My Little Accountant (available via in-app purchase) also includes transaction statements and profit and loss reports.

Paired with the reports are a set of built-in tools to assist the user in controlling their finances. The Budget Planner allows a user to build a detailed budget controlling both overall weekly spending and spending by category. The Trip Planner enables users to cost out a trip factoring in spending money, one off (fixed) costs and recurring (daily c required savings for the trip. Finally, users can export their income and expense information via email or Dropbox using either Comma Separated Value (CSV) or Quicken Interchange Format (QIF) files.
