Freising, Germany - J&H is proud to announce the release of Qake 1.0.2, an important update to their retro arcade game for iOS. Qake is a retro-design game, inspired by the arcade and cell phone classics Qix and Snake. It offers an entertaining diversion and won't cease to enthrall due to its dynamic level design. The update contains major improvements, gameplay adjustments, additional features and bug fixes for the renowned arcade game. The latest version also introduces an additional translation of the game: Korean. Users who selected Korean as their preferred interface language will now be presented with Korean texts when opening the game.

New features added to the game also include the option for users to share high scores with their friends and family. Upon earning a new high score, a sharing button now appears at the bottom of the score screen. When pressed the user can choose to share a screenshot of their score on various social networks such as Facebook and Twitter or send it via text message or email to her friends.

J&H has integrated a tutorial video to help new players adopt the game. The tutorial is accessible through the completely reworked About screen. It introduces all major aspects and gameplay mechanics and is available in all current localizations.

Gameplay adaptations made to the game include increased player movement speed, increased game entity spawning rates, as well as reworked in-game graphics. Increasing the player movement speed supported by more entity spawns allows for a more rapid gameplay while reducing the difficulty of the game at lower levels, which goes in line with player feedback and requests. The reworked graphics have been carefully balanced to utilize the
