

ImageFramer 2.4 supports Snow Leopard and adds French localization

Published on 09/22/09

Apparent Software today announces Snow Leopard support and the addition of French localization to ImageFramer 2.4, their custom image framing utility for Mac OS X. With a focus on ease-of-use, ImageFramer can apply photo-realistic frames to digital images, drawings or any original artwork. Users can add single frames, multiple beveled mats, watermarks, batch process several images at a time, as well as colorize or adjust Hue, Saturation and Brightness of the frames for maximum flexibility.

Ashdod, Israel - Apparent Software today is glad to announce Snow Leopard support and the addition of French localization to ImageFramer 2.4, their custom image framing utility for Mac OS X. ImageFramer includes over 100 frame designs, and supports multiple variations to allow easy comparison of various framing designs. Artists and photographers alike will love the ability to adapt the color, size and beveled mat for the best appearance with very flexible export options. Natural shadows add to the photorealism. ImageFramer offers a selectable background color to simulate hanging on a wall.
