

New Trip Tracker GPS iOS App Helps People Manage Mobility and Save Money

Published on 11/10/15

Duo-Pisces today introduces Trip Tracker GPS 1.0, its new lifestyle app for iOS devices. Featuring a live map updating either in front or background modes, Trip Tracker GPS allows anyone to track different trip types, such as walking, running, cycling, driving, boating, and many others. The user can obtain, save, and share each trip type history with statistics like distance, duration and mean speed. Then easily export all the trip history to an Excel file to have more complex analysis and more.

Rochester, New York - Duo-Pisces today is pleased to announce that Trip Tracker GPS app for iOS has been approved for release in all regions. Trip Tracker GPS allows users to track different trip types such as walking, running, cycling, driving, boating, flying, vacation, and etc. with a live map updating either in front or background modes. If in background mode, a user can continue, for example, to listen a music, or watch a video while Trip Tracker keeps updating the movement.

In the end, the user can obtain, save, and share each trip type history with statistics like distance, duration and mean speed. The users can export all the trip history to an Excel file to have more complex analysis, or email, print summary report and share with others. In addition, unlike other GPS apps, a user does not need to create a user account to use Trip Tracker GPS, and all data are saved in the local device so that they are completely private unless the user choose to share the data with others.

"With Trip Tracker GPS, managing your complete mobility becomes much easier than ever before, and it saves your money by using just one single app to track various types of trips," explained Christine Wang of Duo-Pisces. "In addition, it allows the users to view either the standard, or the hybrid or the satellite images surrounding where the movement is."
