Surrey, Canada - Independent interactive educational game developer, Family 1st Interactive is happy to announce the launch of Letter Trace Battle available for iPhone, iPad, and iPod touch. Letter Trace Battle is a fun and interactive educational game that the entire family can play, from preschool to grandma or grandpa. It teaches children of all ages their Letters, Fruits, Vegetables and Phonics. The app is a combination of letter writing practice and a fun shooting game. It is an excellent game to improve hand-eye coordination skills. Letter Trace Battle is made for iOS, Android, and Amazon devices.

The game is timed so the player can see how long it takes for them to complete a letter level. This way, the player will have an opportunity to beat previous time by playing the letter again, which gives the player the ability to master the letter and provides hours of educational fun. Parents or grandparents can also play the game by comparing best time with their kids or grand kids.

To start a letter level, the player selects a letter from the screen. The player traces the letter by following the arrow directions. A hint is provided when the player is stuck tracing the letter. Once the letter is completely traced, the player is given a reward; a fruit or a vegetable that its name starts with the letter. The player will use the reward to shoot the moving targets (junk food that includes candy, soda, fries, burger, etc) on screen. If a target is hit, a letter of the word on the screen fills in. The player keeps tracing the letter and shooting the targets until the entire word is completely filled in. The player can then move on to another letter or try the same letter again and try to beat the best time.

A recent review from ThelphoneMom "I was pleasantly surprised by how much fun this app was to play. I found my competitive nature coming out as I tried quickly trace each letter and shoot the offending junk food on screen. My preschooler was equally drawn to this game and he loved learning his letters and shooting bad guys! It is really genius the way the developer incorporated a video game type element to keep kids engaged and eager to learn their letters. Even my older kids who are master writers wanted a turn so they could shoot as well!"
