

Pattern Soup App Enables Users to Create Unique Collages and Patterns

Published on 12/31/15

Ultralab Apps introduces Pattern Soup 1.0 their new creative toolkit developed exclusively for iOS devices. Pattern Soup makes it possible to create unique patterns by melding user photography with artworks of contemporary designers. The variety of editing options and backgrounds make sure you create the Pattern Soup of your taste. This release also marks the collaboration between Ultralab Apps and modern artists from France, Belarus, Japan and the USA.

Minsk, Belarus - Ultralab Apps today is proud to announce the availability of Pattern Soup 1.0, an app that stands out from hundreds of collage-making apps on the App Store. By combining photo fragments with abstract backgrounds users can create unusual posts for Instagram and Tumblr and print designs for posters, T-shirts and the like.

Pattern Soup serves as an introduction into the works of contemporary artists. The first version of the app includes exciting patterns by Specialedition.co - a group of designers from Kansas; illustrations by Yoko Honda distinguished by neon hues and unmistakable 80s aesthetics; and pieces by Alain Vonck whose art is inspired by the digital culture of the 90s.

A unique pattern in Pattern Soup is created following an intuitive sequence of steps:

- * Cutting out a photo fragment
- * Applying a stylish grid
- * Selecting an abstract background

Pattern Soup features Ultrastore - a unique service for promoting and selling digital creative assets including photos, sketches, and illustrations. By launching the store and opening access for creative individuals to submit their art, Ultralab Apps hopes to facilitate the development of mobile design community and inspire people to pursue their creative work.

Ultralab Apps team hopes Pattern Soup will be of much inspiration to iPhone users by introducing them to the works of contemporary artists and by giving them an opportunity to create artworks of their own.
