

Edovia releases TouchPad 2.0 for iPhone and iPod touch

Published on 10/05/09

Montreal based Edovia today is proud to announce TouchPad 2.0, the latest version of the utility app. TouchPad is a remote trackpad, keyboard and media remote package that lets you control any Mac remotely. Use your iPhone or your iPod touch to control you computer through WiFi. With TouchPad's intuitive use, you'll feel right at home if you have already used a track pad on a Unibody MacBook. It's almost like having a micro laptop in your hands.

Montreal, Quebec, Canada - Edovia today is proud to announce a new version of TouchPad for iPhone and iPod touch. TouchPad 2.0 now includes a media remote, which now makes three devices in one app. Tired of having a keyboard and a mouse laying around in your living room? Edovia is a software company located in Montreal, Canada. The company was created by Luc Vandal in 2003 and went through several changes and phases, until it devoted all it's resources to the Mac and iPhone platforms. Edovia has been developing apps for the iPhone since early 2008 and offered Linguo and Steps on the App Store opening, on July 11, 2008. We love what we do and we are driven by creativity. We believe in developing solutions that are easy to use, intuitive, innovative and fun. Copyright 2009 Edovia. All Rights Reserved.
