

SongPost available now on the App Store: Creatively Share Audio Anywhere

Published on 03/30/16

Independent app developer, Edward Filowat announces SongPost 1.11 for iPhone, iPad and iPod touch. SongPost is a fun and simple tool that allows you to easily post audio files or voice recordings to any site such as Facebook and YouTube, Instagram, SoundCloud, and Tumblr. A video is instantly created from the original audio file by adding a photo along with optional text overlays and video effects. Version 1.11 includes an important bugfix for Dropbox importing.

Brooklyn, New York - Independent app developer, Edward Filowat is pleased to announce the release of SongPost 1.11 for iPhone, iPad and iPod touch. SongPost is a simple tool that both beginners and experienced app users can use to easily post songs, voice recordings, or other audio files to any site (including video only sites) such as Facebook and YouTube, Instagram, SoundCloud, and Tumblr.

Along with the audio, users can attach a photo and write text captions that render to a finished video along with audio (pitch shifting, echo, distortion) and video effects (kaleidoscope, turntable, siri, and doppler waves). The app can be used to creating audio memes, sharing music files, sending creative audio messages to friends.

"Sharing audio online is a lot harder than it should be," said Filowat. "With just a few clicks you can post audio anywhere and be creative with SongPost; there are all kinds of fun uses for this app for both beginners and professionals."

Filowat is the co-creator of the popular "bossjock studio" and "bossjock jr" apps that allow podcasters, voiceover artists and DJ's to create and publish audio productions on iOS in real time. He is also working on an unreleased musical messaging platform "kilojam," and is currently seeking beta testers.
