Published on 10/09/09

Future Media Concepts is pleased to announce the availability of FMC|Online, an instructor-led, online training classes for post, broadcast and content creators. FMC|Online utilizes the latest in desktop sharing technology; providing an interactive platform for attendees to attend courses and work with instructors live using voice or chat, while simultaneously receiving true to life assistance during exercises.

Boston, MA - Future Media Concepts (FMC), the US premier authorized digital media training organization for post-production, broadcast professionals and content creators, is pleased to announce the availability of FMC|Online; instructor-led, online training classes for post, broadcast and content creators. FMC|Online utilizes the latest in desktop sharing technology; providing an interactive platform for attendees to attend courses and work with instructors live using voice or chat, while simultaneously receiving true to life assistance during exercises.

"We would like to think of FMC|Online as a new branch office in the utmost convenient location. Traveling can be difficult and the virtual nature of FMC|Online gives students the opportunity to attend our courses from their own homes," says Ben Kozuch, co-founder of FMC. "The curriculum is similar to our in-person training; offering instruction on the latest digital editing, motion graphics, desktop publishing, web development and Mac OSX technologies. Our FMC|Online instructors are also available to provide immediate feedback and assistance during presentations as if they were positioned just across the room. We are looking forward to students taking full advantage of FMC|Online while we continue to enhance its offerings."
