Udupi, India, Global Delight is pleased to announce the release of a new version of Camera Plus that makes sharing your photos even easier! With this release, a share button has been added to quickly upload photos to Tumblr. Camera Plus is also teaming up with FreePrints service. Users in the US, UK, Germany, Italy, and France who download the FreePrints app can get up to 10 Print Photos delivered free, no credit card needed, if they order within 24 hours of downloading. Users can order prints directly from the Camera Plus App by choosing the photo they want printed, tapping the Print icon in the top right corner, and being directed to the FreePrints app.

To celebrate this new release, Apple is featuring Camera Plus as a Free App of the Week. Normally $1.99, this app will be available on the iTunes App Store for free from May 5th to May 12th. The features that come with this version will include AirSnap(TM), Camera Plus's revolutionary remote photography feature that turns any two iOS 8/9 devices into a camera/remote system. Using Bluetooth(TM), infrastructure Wi-Fi networks, or peer-to-peer Wi-Fi, Camera Plus connects any two iOS devices with the app and allows one to be a camera, and the other to be the camera trigger, allowing for effortless group shots, difficult camera angles, and other uses. With the ability to capture photos and videos remotely along with instant previews, rear flash usage, and the choice of both front and rear cameras, AirSnap provides users with professional camerawork options previously unavailable to iOS photographers.

Along with AirSnap, Camera Plus offers three Focus settings: Macro, Normal, and Far. There are also three Lumy options: Brightness, Exposure, and White Balance. Once a Lumy slider is chosen, Camera Plus will detect the style of the photo and adjust the lighting to fit the photo. There are other 1-touch enhancements available for use with the Camera Plus app.

All of these features come with the basic app, and featured as a Free app of the Week on the Apple's iTunes App Store.
