

Apple Magic Keyboard with Numeric Keypad Gets Custom Case via WaterField

Published on 06/12/17

WaterField Designs today extends its Magic Keyboard Slip Case line with a custom-fitted size for Apple's new Magic Keyboard with Numeric Keypad. The Keyboard Slip case protects the device from dings and spills with light padding enveloped in a waxed canvas or ballistic nylon shell. The Case includes a rear mesh pocket to hold the Lightning-to-USB Cable or other small accessories. WaterField designs and manufactures all of its gear in San Francisco allowing for quick design and turnaround time.

San Francisco, California - WaterField Designs, a San Francisco manufacturer of custom laptop sleeves, bags and cases for digital gear, extends its Magic Keyboard Slip Case line with a custom-fitted size for Apple's new Magic Keyboard with Numeric Keypad. The Keyboard Slip case protects the device from dings and spills with light padding enveloped in a waxed canvas or ballistic nylon shell.

"With its new full-sized arrow controls for gaming and the addition of the 10-digit keypad, the new Apple Magic Keyboard with Numeric Keypad is sure to become a necessity for gamers, finance professionals and photographers, among others," explained company founder Gary Waterfield. "But, as too many of us know from experience, one small spill can instantly ruin a keyboard. We designed the Keyboard Slip case to protect the Magic Keyboards so that users can take them from home to gaming parties, from workstation to workstation, or from work to home with peace of mind that they'll be protected."

The Keyboard Slip, in black ballistic nylon or tan waxed canvas is lightly padded to protect the sensitive Magic Keyboard with Numeric Keypad or standard Magic Keyboard while in transit. The Case includes a rear mesh pocket to hold the Lightning-to-USB Cable or other small accessories.

WaterField designs and manufactures all of its gear in San Francisco allowing for quick design and turnaround time on custom-sized cases for new devices from Apple and its competitors. For carrying the new Apple Keyboard with Numeric Keypad along with the Apple Mouse 2, Magic Trackpad 2 and other necessities, WaterField offers the Keyboard Travel Express. The Keyboard Slip and Keyboard Travel Express can be stylishly stowed in any of WaterField Design's messenger bags, briefcases or tablet bags.
