

Watermark and Share Videos from Your Phone with UptiiQ's Latest Update

Published on 09/07/17

EuclidIQ, LLC today announces UptiiQ 2.0, an important feature update to their popular video tools mobile app for iOS and Android devices. UptiiQ aims to be a one-stop-shop for posting videos to social media. Version 2.0 sports three major new features for videos creators, including a new tool to add custom watermarks to videos. UptiiQ's new features add to the existing tool set provided by the app, which allows users to post videos to multiple social networks simultaneously from a mobile phone.

Concord, Massachusetts - Today EuclidIQ, LLC has updated UptiiQ 2.0, their popular video tools mobile app with three major new features for videos creators, including a new tool to add custom watermarks to videos. In addition, UptiiQ users will be able to post their video creations not just to personal Facebook news feeds, but to business pages and groups as well. Support has also been added for Vimeo, in addition to Facebook, YouTube and Twitter.

UptiiQ aims to be a one-stop-shop for posting videos to social media. "We want to make UptiiQ the ultimate app for anyone who uses video to promote themselves, their business, or just loves to share online," said Richard Wingard, CEO of EuclidIQ, the developers of the UptiiQ app. "All of our new features came directly from feedback from our users, and we will continue to make updates as new requests come in."

UptiiQ's new features add to the existing tool set provided by the app, which allows users to post videos to multiple social networks simultaneously from a mobile phone. Videos are optimized and encoded to ensure that they retain the best visual quality for each network. Because videos are sent to the cloud before any social network, UptiiQ uses less of a user's data than if each were posted individually.
