

Typs is on a mission to cure Texting Anxiety

Published on 10/21/19

California based Textfeed, Inc. today releases Typs 1.0.8, an app with a mission to cure texting anxiety by giving people access to the best text messages, and feedback from a caring community. The app offers text messages for a variety of categories that people can copy/paste into their messaging platform of choice. Categories include "Flirt," "Just matched," "Ask him/her out" and many more. Texts are ranked within categories in a Reddit-esque upvote/downvote format.

West Hollywood, California - Textfeed, Inc., a mobile app startup, is on a mission to cure texting anxiety. To do this, they've created a crowd-sourced network of high-quality text messages for a variety of categories that people can copy/paste into their messaging platform of choice. Categories include "Flirt", "Just matched", "Ask him/her out" and many more. Texts are ranked within categories in a Reddit-esque upvote/downvote format.

"Texting anxiety is a serious issue which affects 1 in 5 people in the US. We've felt this issue first-hand as founders, and our goal is to help reduce the stress and anxiety that comes with texting someone you really care about." said Gil Demeter, CEO and Co-Founder. "The Huffington Post agrees, having published an article titled 'Beat Text Message Anxiety in New Relationships' telling readers to not 'let waiting and responding to text messages take over [their] life.'"

Everyone has found themselves in a situation where they simply don't know how to reply to a text message, or initiate a texting conversation. Typically, people either go with the first thing that comes to mind, sit around for hours and send some over-the-top response, or ask their friends for advice. As a result, relationships take a toll. All it takes is one bad text message to cause a catastrophe. The New York Times, in their article titled "Bubbles Carry a lot of Weight", talks about the stress & anxiety that texting and the time between text messages causes. Texting anxiety is causing as much harm as social media in 2019, yet it is talked about on a significantly smaller scale.

On the Typs app, people can submit text messages that are then voted on by the community. People can comment on texts & give advice and tips based on personal experience. Users have the ability to follow their favorite texters and build a community of like-minded people they can share ideas and texts with.

Textfeed, Inc. is a mobile app startup created by a venture capitalist, serial entrepreneur, and a digital marketing ninja. All 3 founders have experienced the anxiety and stress that comes with texting, having used most of the dating apps in existence. The idea of Typs started initially with just a group chat where the founders would share text messages that worked for them in certain situations. Word spread and tons of people started asking to join the group chat, and it got to the point where it was clear there was an obvious problem that a very high number of people were experiencing. This spawned the idea of Typs - A crowdsourced network of high-quality text messages for a variety of situations, voted on by the community. It's like asking your best friend for texting advice, but way better. All Material and Software (C) Copyright 2019 Textfeed, Inc. All Rights Reserved.
