

SyncMate 8 is here - macOS Catalina, iOS 13 and Android 10 supported

Published on 11/05/19

Electronic Team, Inc. today releases SyncMate 8, an update to their popular application for macOS. SyncMate is a safe and trustworthy app for syncing data between Mac and multiple devices like other Macs, Android and iOS devices, as well as numerous online accounts and cloud storages like iCloud, Dropbox, Google and Microsoft services. One can sync contacts, calendars, playlists, bookmarks, reminders and much more. SyncMate 8 now fully supports macOS 10.15 Catalina, iOS 13 and Android 10.

Alexandria, Virginia - The latest version of SyncMate by Electronic Team, Inc. has finally arrived, carrying highly improved stability of the synchronization process for the latest versions of operating systems for all the devices, thanks to fully updated sync mechanism. SyncMate 8 now fully supports macOS 10.15 Catalina, iOS 13 and Android 10.

SyncMate is a safe and trustworthy app for macOS for syncing data between Mac and multiple devices like other Macs, Android and iOS devices, as well as numerous online accounts and cloud storages like iCloud, Dropbox, Google and Microsoft services (Office 365 Home and Business, Outlook). MTP devices and other mounted storages are supported as well. One can sync contacts, calendars, playlists, bookmarks, reminders and much more, as well as transfer files and folders (music, videos, images, etc.).

While SyncMate offers convenient backup features, it is not limited to the backup functionality, it is also a true sync app. During synchronization the data is updated between Mac apps and the corresponding apps on the devices - other Macs, iOS devices, online accounts, etc.

With SyncMate one can manage SMS messages by simply connecting an Android or iOS device to Mac. One will find advanced text message management possibilities useful: send text messages and browse through call history straight from Mac.

System Requirements:

- * OS X 10.10 and later
