

Syndicated Puzzles releases Puzzle Dice - A new way to use dice

Published on 11/21/09

Syndicated Puzzles today announced Puzzle Dice, a unique competitive game for iPhone and iPod Touch. This challenging sequential thriller has built in light bulbs automatically informing players when they are solving the puzzle correctly. If the puzzle doesn't start to light up like a Christmas tree, players need to rethink their strategies. With over 800 puzzles of increasing difficulty, and a single solution to each puzzle, you are guaranteed endless hours of enjoyment.

Victoria, Canada - Syndicated Puzzles is building on their franchise game called Str8ts, by releasing a unique competitive game called Puzzle Dice. This challenging sequential thriller designed for the iPhone and the iPod Touch has built in light bulbs that automatically inform players when they have placed four die in their correct locations.

If the puzzle doesn't start to light up like a Christmas tree players will need to rethink their strategies while solving Puzzle Dice. Puzzle Dice uses the sequential mechanics of Str8ts, but really is a standalone game that forces players to solve the entire puzzle four die at a time.

With over 800 puzzles of increasing difficulty, and a single solution to each puzzle, you are guaranteed endless hours of enjoyment. If you have been waiting for the next puzzle craze, you will have to try out Puzzle Dice. Arranging invisible die in sequential order will challenge even the seasoned puzzle fan. Competing against the rest of the world for the fastest time while using the least amount of moves really makes this puzzle an instant classic.
